

Connected

If you look from space toward our earth, can it be argued that we do NOT share this planet? Are we not all connected by this fact alone?

Traveling back to Earth in January 1971, having just walked on the moon, Apollo 14 astronaut Edgar Mitchell had an experience for which nothing in his life had prepared him. As he approached the planet we know as home, he was filled with an inner conviction as certain as any mathematical equation he'd ever solved. He knew that the beautiful blue world to which he was returning is part of a living system, harmonious and whole – and that we all participate, as he expressed it later, "in a universe of consciousness."
